The emergence of bullying is based on the formation of specific relationships among children who bully, children who are bullied, and children who observe the bullying—the bully, the victim, and the bystander. A child who

Whatever form it takes, the bystander become a bully right along with the original attacker.

When a group of bystanders laugh and/or cheer the bully on, it encourages the bully to escalate the attack. These bystanders are participating in the attack and are as culpable as the bully even though they are not the ones doing the bullying.

Bullying and the Bystander - Just Say YES - Bullying ...

From anxiety and uncertainty, to fear and guilt, bullying significantly impacts bystanders. 1. In fact, preliminary research suggests that kids who witness bullying may be as much at risk psychologically as the victims and the bullies. 2 And much like victims of bullying, their physical health, mental health, and even academics can be affected. Here are six ways bystanders are impacted by bullying.
